

March 2020

Gemini has invested much in preparing our company to be a reliable supplier throughout many disaster scenarios, including performing as your manufacturing partner in the event of an outbreak of infectious diseases such as COVID-19. We have strengthened our inventories of raw materials, established alternate supply chains for other requirements of our manufacturing, moved our IT servers to a secured off-site location and decentralized our customer service and manufacturing areas where possible—all to protect us from incidents such as adverse weather, utility failures, localized quarantines, or logistic disruptions.

The net effect is that we are as prepared for any emergency as is feasible. We can't protect against every possible scenario—but we are very prepared for the inevitable ripples that come forward as a result of COVID-19 in North America. We are also doing our part to keep our people safe and being reasonable about travel and promoting good hygiene—which is the best defense against viruses such as COVID-19.

You can rest assured in continuing your partnership with Gemini for all your dimensional identification needs.

Thanks,

Frederick M. Oss
